

Our Jurong Lake Story

Jurong began as forests and swamps.

In the 1960s, it began to play a vital role in Singapore's industrialisation. By 1970s, housing estates and other recreational facilities were established.

Sungai Jurong
Source: Ministry of Information, Communications and the Arts (MICA) Collection, Courtesy of National Archives of Singapore

Opening of Taman Jurong Community Centre, 1965
Source: Ministry of Information, Communications and the Arts (MICA) Collection, Courtesy of National Archives of Singapore

Jurong Hill & Jurong Industrial Estate
Source: Ministry of Information, Communications and the Arts (MICA) Collection, Courtesy of National Archives of Singapore

Jurong as we know it today has taken shape...

In the next phase of development, the Jurong Lake area will be revitalised with the key proposals under the Remaking Our Heartland programme:

Our Water Playgrounds
Our Outdoor Living Rooms
Connect Our Communities
Shape Our Tomorrow

© HDB